Hello, I'm Kelly Lutter. I am originally from Ohio, where I found my love of agriculture with the help of my FFA advisor. At Wilmington College, I received a degree in Ag Business. After graduation, I relocated to central South Dakota where I met my now husband, Josh. My full time job is in the seed business as a District Sales Manager. I really enjoy working with a network of dealers to help ensure farmers get the best products for their acres. As much as I love the row crop side of the ag industry, it has been exciting to be introduced to the livestock side through Josh and his family. In the late 90's the Lutter family started custom feeding buffalo. Since then, the family operation, Buffalo County Bison, has grown into a large reproductive herd alongside expanding the feedlot. The Lutters take great pride in breeding pure bison, and work with Texas A&M to test and verify the genetic purity of the herd. I have learned so much from helping out at the ranch (I make a pretty great gate opener), and have really enjoyed getting to meet other bison producers through the DTBA. I'm looking forward to serving as one of the directors at large, and hope to continue building relationships and learning from all of you.
